

To future homeowner of a Brown Development home:

A little over five years ago, my wife and I purchased land and began the final design approval on our home with Greg Brown and Brown Development. After numerous alterations to the structure and countless changes to interior features, construction began on schedule and was completed as agreed to while incorporating many additional ideas and changes.

Throughout the entire process, Greg was always personally involved and accessible to either of us, an important consideration as we were on the mainland. We actually had Greg's cell number, still do, and he always answered our call or got back to us including when he was off-island. Still does today. As with any new home construction, there were incremental costs involved due to requested changes and additions to the original plans. These were priced out and provided to us in a timely manner and then adhered to. There were no surprises or unforeseen additional costs throughout our home construction, very straight-forward.

We found Greg and his team to be quite flexible and helpful in working with us on what we wanted in a finished product, whether design or component selection. His staff and especially his on-site supervisor and employees were skilled, concerned with a quality-finished product, very cooperative and always sought our feedback as our home came together. The quality of the work was excellent, whether sub-contractor or Brown Development personnel. Follow-up post construction warranty work was addressed promptly and to our satisfaction. More importantly, nearly six years later, non-warranty maintenance and additional projects have been completed with Greg's assistance on company selection.

To say we are pleased with our home would be an understatement. Brown Development built a beautifully finished home, on time and on budget. Robin and I would recommend Greg Brown and his organization without reservation. They deliver as promised.
